COUNTERINTELLIGENCE PROGRAM -
INTERNAL SECURITY
DISRUPTION OF HATE GROUPS -

Effective immediately, the Bureau is instituting a coordinated Counterintelligence Program (Cointelpro) directed against Klan-type and hate organizations. Offices receiving copies of this letter are instructed to immediately open an active control file, captioned as above, and to assign responsibility for this program to an experienced and imaginative Special Agent who is well versed in investigation of hate and racist-type organizations and their membership.

The purpose of this program is to expose, disrupt and otherwise neutralize the activities of the various Klans and hate organizations, their leadership and adherents. The activities of these groups must be followed on a continuous basis so we may take advantage of all opportunities for counterintelligence and also inspire action in instances where circumstances warrant. The devious maneuvers and duplicity of these groups must be exposed to public scrutiny through the cooperation of reliable news media sources, both locally and at the Seat of Government. We must frustrate any effort of the groups to consolidate their forces or to recruit new or youthful adherents. In every instance, consideration should be given to disrupting the organized activity of these groups and no opportunity should be missed to capitalize upon organizational and personal conflicts of their leadership.

Letter to SAC, Albany
RE: COUNTERINTELLIGENCE PROGRAM
BLACK NATIONALIST - HATE GROUPS

to consolidate their forces or to recruit new or youthful adherents must be frustrated. No opportunity should be missed to exploit through counterintelligence techniques the organizational and personal conflicts of the leaderships of the groups and where possible an effort should be made to capitalize upon existing conflicts between competing black nationalist organizations. When an opportunity is apparent to disrupt or neutralize black nationalist, hate-type organizations through the cooperation of established local news media contacts or through such contact with sources available to the Seat of Government, in every instance careful attention must be given to the proposal to insure the targeted group is disrupted, ridiculed, or discredited through the publicity and not merely publicized. Consideration should be given to techniques to preclude violence-prone or rabble-rouser leaders of hate groups from spreading their philosophy publicly or through various mass communication media.

Many individuals currently active in black nationalist organizations have backgrounds of immorality, subversive activity, and criminal records. Through your investigation of key agitators, you should endeavor to establish their unsavory backgrounds. Be alert to determine evidence of misappropriation of funds or other types of personal misconduct on the part of militant nationalist leaders so any practical or warranted counter-intelligence may be instituted.

Intensified attention under this program should be afforded to the activities of such groups as the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, Revolutionary Action Movement, the Deacons for Defense and Justice, Congress of Racial Equality, and the Nation of Islam. Particular emphasis should be given to extremists who direct the activities and policies of revolutionary or militant groups such as Stokely Carmichael, H. "Rap" Brown, Elijah Mohammed, and Maxwell Stanford.

At this time the Bureau is setting up no requirement for status letters to be periodically submitted under this program. It will be incumbent upon you to insure the program is being afforded necessary and continuing attention and that no opportunities will be overlooked for counterintelligence action.

This program should not be confused with the program entitled "Communist Party, USA, Counterintelligence Program, Internal Security - C," (Bufile 100-3-104), which is directed

Critics of police spying sue Denver

City serves as example of how fear of terrorism could lead to abuses

January 29, 2003 | By Judith Graham | Judith Graham,SPECIAL TO THE SUN

DENVER - Glen Morris, a Native American activist, learned of a plot to kill him when he read a secret file that the Denver Police Department had kept on him for 16 years.

The FBI had told Denver police that a rival faction in the American Indian Movement was plotting the assassination. The police put the information in their records but never contacted Morris.

When Sister Antonia Anthony got her file, she discovered that a group she had helped establish, the Chiapas Coalition, had been labeled a "criminal extremist" organization "dedicated to the overthrow of the Mexican government."

The white-haired, 74-year-old Franciscan nun threw up her hands and laughed heartily when asked her reaction. "Ridiculous, just ludicrous," she said and, turning serious, "shocking."

Denver's police spy file scandal spans nearly five decades of secret intelligence-gathering on more than 3,200 people and 208 organizations.

Many of those people did nothing more than attend peaceful protests at the state Capitol or go to meetings of groups that police decided might represent a threat to public order. Among those were Amnesty International and the American Friends Service Committee, both recipients of the Nobel Peace Prize.

Now, as police departments from New York City to Los Angeles press for expanded surveillance capabilities in the wake of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, Denver police find themselves barraged with criticism and held up as an example of what can go wrong when police powers are largely unchecked.

The American Civil Liberties Union of Colorado, which brought the spy files to light, has filed a class action lawsuit against the city seeking to end such intelligence-gathering practices as videotaping peaceful demonstrations and infiltrating meetings of organizations with no record of criminal activity.

"These kind of practices have the potential to harm people's ability or willingness to freely express criticism of government policies, chilling free speech," said Mark Silverstein, Colorado ACLU legal director.

"Who does this information go to? How widely has it been shared?" he asked. In an era of terrorist threats and heightened security, being labeled a criminal extremist or tagged as a suspicious person in a government database can have serious consequences, Silverstein said.

Although city officials have admitted some practices were wrong, Denver municipal lawyers are contesting the suit, arguing that no overt harm was done. Meanwhile, Denver has implemented a new policy allowing police to collect intelligence only if there is "reasonable suspicion" that a person is involved in criminal activity.

The alleged abuses in Denver evoke memories of police spying scandals of the past, such as the FBI's infamous Cointelpro operation under J. Edgar Hoover, which monitored civil rights leaders and anti-Vietnam War groups, and Chicago's Red Squad, whose snooping on political activists reached a zenith in the 1960s and 1970s.

Legal restrictions subsequently imposed on Chicago police were eased two years ago after the city argued that its ability to investigate gangs and terrorism had been compromised.

After all these years what is still missing....

- Reportedly 1,034 latent prints taken during investigation were not checked against the FBI's database

- Ten years after the bombing, Terry Nichols led federal agents to boxes of explosives he had buried under his house in Kansas, which had been missed in multiple searches. Another seven and half boxes of high explosives went unused in the bombing and he had no idea where they went.

Evaluation & Analysis

When it is done right

It may make your case much easier for your jury to understand.

Ten Steps to Establishing a Successful Criminal Intelligence Program

1. Create a proper environment:
   - Obtain the active support of the agency's chief executive officer
   - Gain the political and budgetary support from the appropriate elected officials
   - Educate the agency and the community concerning the benefits of having a criminal intelligence function
2. Establish the criminal intelligence unit as a proactive crime prevention operation which supports the concept of community-oriented policing.
3. Design a unit mission statement focused toward specific criminal activities and disseminate it to the entire agency.
4. Select qualified personnel, including a trained analyst, to staff the unit.
5. Obtain separate, secure quarters for the unit.
6. Implement and enforce professional guidelines for
   - Unit operations
   - File procedures
   - Security
   - Special expense funds
   - Informant control
7. Provide training for:
   - The Chief executive officer
   - Appropriate elected officials
   - Criminal intelligence managers and supervisors
   - Criminal intelligence officers and analysts
   - The remainder of the agency's personnel
8. Liaison with neighboring agencies and participate in regional and state criminal intelligence networks. Join the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit .
9. Require both strategic and tactical products from the unit and evaluate its operations on a regular schedule.
10. Ensure the CEO meets regularly with the criminal intelligence unit supervisor to provide appropriate direction.
